What you want on your farm is power that will do your work faster, better and cheaper. The form of power is not the most important question. You want the best and cheapest available.

There are many different types of tractors selling at different prices, that produce power at many different costs.

But it is not any certain type of tractor that you are interested in. It is power. If any one tractor produces that power--if it does the work day after day, year after year at cheapest cost--that is a tractor you should buy.

The third column headed "Horse Power Hours per gallon" is taken directly from the Nebraska reports. The fourth column shows how much the fuel consumption amounts to in a ten hour day, with an average load of 20 horse power.

$385.70 Saved on Fuel Alone

Because fuel cost is one of the big items in the production of cheap power, you ought to know what you can expect on the fuel economy record of the tractor you buy before you buy it.

The most reliable figures on this are those published by the Nebraska State University in the tests they conducted on tractors in 1920 and 1921. Practically all of the principal tractors manufactured in the United States were tested. A law in Nebraska requires every manufacturer to submit his tractor for severe tests before he is allowed to sell in the State.

The above chart shows the fuel economy obtained in the Nebraska State Tractor Tests on the varying load test on all tractors with a belt rating of from 18 to 25 H.P. Study this table if you want some plain, unvarnished facts about fuel economy.

Note that the average fuel used by all kerosene tractors (OilPull excluded) is 31.4 gallons per ten-hour day, while the OilPull used only 21.1 gallons—a clean saving of 13.3 gallons, or 39% per day. At 29c per gallon this means a saving of $385.70, or 39% saving the first 100 days on fuel alone.

Figure how many days you expect to use your tractor each season, multiply the saving of 13.3 gallons per day by the cost of kerosene, and you will get some idea of the saving an OilPull will make for you on fuel alone.

Figure how many years you expect to use your tractor (the OilPull averages more than 10 years service) and you will quickly see that the fuel saving alone, not to mention the big saving on upkeep and in lowered depreciation, the OilPull is by far the cheapest tractor you can own.

Come in and let us tell you more about these big savings. Also let us tell you about Triple Heat Control—the reason for OilPull fuel economy.

Death of Mrs. P. Liesemer

Another of the pioneers of the district has passed away in the person of Mrs. Wilhelmina Liesemer, nee Ruppert. After an illness of about four weeks, during which time she manifested Christian fortitude, she died Thursday morning, April 13th, aged 81 years, 6 months and 8 days. She was well and favorably known by a large circle of relatives and friends.

After coming to Canada and spending fifty years in Ontario who with her family moved West, settling east of Didsbury in 1905. Her husband Peter Liesemer preceded her in death July 1st, 1918.

Ten of the thirteen children live to mourn the loss of a true Christian mother. Henry, of Carleton Place, George, Galt, William, Waterloo, John, Peter, Edward and Conrad of Didsbury; Mrs. J. H. Miller, Minn.; Mrs. H. Rother, Didsbury; Mrs. Dichel, Calgary. Besides these there are thirty-two grandchildren and sixteen great-grandchildren.

She was a faithful member of the Evangelical Church, in which she exerted a Christian influence for 65 years.

Funeral services were held at the home of her daughter, Mrs. H. Bender and in the Evangelical church on Sunday afternoon, April 16th. In spite of the snow storm the church was well filled, even in the gallery. Rev. Bender and Gupta assisted the pastor of the church in the services. Burial was made in Didsbury Cemetery.

The bereaved community is commensally extended to the bereaved.

AROUND THE TOWN

About fifty neighbors and friends gave a surprise party to Mrs. Chas. Hendrick last Friday evening as he returned leaving the next Tuesday for the States on an extended visit to her mother and other relatives.

We notice that a greatly number of former Didsburyites who are now out teaching, or have been attending Normal are home for the holidays. All spent a pleasant evening and after lunch they left wishing Mrs. Wendrich a safe journey and an enjoyable summer.

"The Inferior Box" showing at the Opera House on Saturday night, with Mildred Harris' comedy, "The Inferior Box" in the title role, carries an offer of a prize of $500 for the best answer as to which is the inferior box. This prize is given by the Film Co. but must be handed in to Mr. Fisher on or before April 25th. Come and see the picture so that you can give a good answer. The star of the picture, Mildred Harris, says that the answer is given in the picture. See if you can pick out the answer and what it is.

"I haven't played the game fair with you two," said John, and I went to tell her. "I played the wrong game. Twenty-five years have passed. It was the wrong game. Now without a penny, I can start just where I started twenty-five years ago. The only difference is that I can't add and subtract of a young one. I'm going to take another husband and start again, at the right age, if Mary will start with me."

She put her hand in mine and her eyes were brilliant again with the fire of youth. "You know there is only one answer, John," she whispered.

Harris called Frank over from the group of men. "There's one thing more," he continued. "When I started I had only a wife to love and I don't intend to take any longer responsibility now. Alan will be having an amnesia to you. Jim Travers, I am speaking to you. I need you as a husband for some things, but I'm going to make a debt with the only girl I have left."

The light became the light of youth, the light of love and health shined in her eyes and shined through the hair of her youth.

"Take her, John," said Mary, "she is a good girl, and she can't wait for you."

Anaemia

Thin, watery blood is no more nourishing than thin, watery milk—Jim milk.

But you can soon enrich thin blood, overcome the anaemic condition and build up the whole system by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mrs. F. G. Simmon, 42 Curtis St., Bradford, Ont., writes: "For about eight years I suffered from anaemia. My circulation was poor, my gums and lips were pale, and my hands and feet were always cold. I was nervous and unable to sleep well. I had frequent headaches, neural centres and easily excited or irritated. There was a burning sensation in my ears. I had been also one of my complaints, and I often was attacked by weak spells. I went to a doctor and he told me I was anaemic, but as I did not get any better, I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after the first box I felt better and my head was completely cleared. I continued using the Nerve Food for some time. I am quite well now, and I cheerfully and gratefully recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to people suffering as I did before. I send you a testimonial as I did before."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50¢ a box, all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

"You think so now," said her father. "You know nothing about it. In twenty-five years you will know just how great a gift she is—or she will not be worthy of his mother."

His and his wife were gazing with unseeing eyes into the mountains when Arthur handed them a letter. "It comes in the mail which the boys brought out this morning," he said, "and I forgot all about it until this morning."

It was from Bradshaw. Harris opened it indifferently, but the first lines caused his interest, and he read it eagerly to the end.

"My dear Harris," it ran, "on receipt of your telegram I immediately opened negotiations through my connections looking to a sale of your complete set of mining equipment, including his crop and equipment, and I succeeded in getting an offer of $10,000. You set on it, and had all the papers drawn up when I discovered that among us we had made a serious omission. You will remember that, a good many years ago, when you were taking on some fresh obligations, you transferred the homesteaded land to your wife, and I assumed the purchaser that there would be no difficulty about getting title from your wife. But as all buildings are in the homesteaded quarter he would agree to nothing better than paying $20,000 for the rest of your land, leaving the homesteaded quarter, with the buildings, stock and implements, out of the transaction. At the time we seemed to fair one for the balance of the property, and as I assumed your need of money was urgent, I closed a deal on that basis, closed the agreement, and remitted the proceeds to you at once by wire. I trust my actions in the matter meet with your approval."

"You're sincere," "George Bradshaw."

Harris placed the letter in the hands of his wife. She tried to read it, but a great happiness enveloped her as a flood and the typewritten characters seemed to swim before her. "What does it mean, John?" she asked, holding his hand in a trembling grip. "What does it mean?"

It means that the homesteaded quarter is sold—after all—that it is still yours, with the buildings and machinery, and stock, and this year's crop will be yours to boot.

"Still yours?" John, you mean—still yours?"

In the kind confusion of seeing everyone seemed to have forgotten, or discarded, Gardner. But at this moment he came back, and he said to the doctor, "Can you get out of the house?"

Gardner's eyes," he explained, as he came up to the door.

Some of the party received their hats.

"Not that that way—no that way," exclaimed the doctor. "I mean let's take—shipped—boat if, if you understand. Most extraordinary!"

He was taking his hat. It was about noon, and he seemed resting easier, so he slipped downstairs for the ambulance. When I went back—I was only one moment—there wasn't sight or sound of him.

The men stared at each other for a moment, then followed the doctor in a race for Gardner's room. They found it as he said. There was nothing but a faint sound of Gardner.

When the men conducted a swift examination, not to Gardner's room, but to the one in which Allen was lying. He was rewarded by finding the little bit of paper, with a few words of wonder still clinging to it. The doctor explained the results through his magnifying glass, then, somewhat dubiously, raised them on a makeshift table to his tongue, and after a moment's hesitation swallowed in an impressive, scholarly fashion.

"Such a man!" he exclaimed. "Common, wide-awake! Most extraordinary!"

But Sergeant Grey was at the open window. It was only an eight-foot drop to the soft earth, and to the policeman there was no longer any nervous, in Gardner's disappearance. The man's suicide was a carefully planned ruse to be employed by Gardner if the worst came to the worst.

At that moment the sound of loose's hoofs was heard on the gravel road, and a light, hand-drawn cart, with Gardner dashed through a gap in the trees that skirted the base of the hills. He was on the policeman's horse, and riding like wild fire.

"I want all of you men, and a horse to go with me," he said, "and we must put a man on each. I will give immediate priority, in the hope of riding down before he can throw off the scent, and I will leave it to you, Mr. Arthur, to organize the posse and secure the whole country until he is located."

At first a first words two men had rushed to the road, and were already mounting horses. The first and fastest was placed at the command of the policeman, and in a minute he was away, riding breakneck into the hills, but the delay was enough to give Gardner about a mile's lead, and the Government house was a hawk for it on the ranch.

"You think so now," said her father. "You know nothing about it. In twenty-five years you will know just how great a gift she is—or she will not be worthy of his mother."

His and his wife were gazing with unseeing eyes into the mountains when Arthur handed them a letter. "It comes in the mail which the boys brought out this morning," he said, "and I forgot all about it until this morning."

I trust my actions in the matter meet with your approval."

"You're sincere," "George Bradshaw."

Harris placed the letter in the hands of his wife. She tried to read it, but a great happiness enveloped her as a flood and the typewritten characters seemed to swim before her. "What does it mean, John?" she asked, holding his hand in a trembling grip. "What does it mean?"

It means that the homesteaded quarter is sold—after all—that it is still yours, with the buildings and machinery, and stock, and this year's crop will be yours to boot.

"Still yours?" John, you mean—still yours?"

In the kind confusion of seeing everyone seemed to have forgotten, or discarded, Gardner. But at this moment he came back, and he said to the doctor, "Can you get out of the house?"

Gardner's eyes," he explained, as he came up to the door.

Some of the party received their hats.

"Not that that way—no that way," exclaimed the doctor. "I mean let's take—shipped—boat if, if you understand. Most extraordinary!"

He was taking his hat. It was about noon, and he seemed resting easier, so he slipped downstairs for the ambulance. When I went back—I was only one moment—there wasn't sight or sound of him.

The men stared at each other for a moment, then followed the doctor in a race for Gardner's room. They found it as he said. There was nothing but a faint sound of Gardner.

When the men conducted a swift examination, not to Gardner's room, but to the one in which Allen was lying. He was rewarded by finding the little bit of paper, with a few words of wonder still clinging to it. The doctor explained the results through his magnifying glass, then, somewhat dubiously, raised them on a makeshift table to his tongue, and after a moment's hesitation swallowed in an impressive, scholarly fashion.

"Such a man!" he exclaimed. "Common, wide-awake! Most extraordinary!"

But Sergeant Grey was at the open window. It was only an eight-foot drop to the soft earth, and to the policeman there was no longer any nervous, in Gardner's disappearance. The man's suicide was a carefully planned ruse to be employed by Gardner if the worst came to the worst.

At that moment the sound of loose's hoofs was heard on the gravel road, and a light, hand-drawn cart, with Gardner dashed through a gap in the trees that skirted the base of the hills. He was on the policeman's horse, and riding like wild fire.

"I want all of you men, and a horse to go with me," he said, "and we must put a man on each. I will give immediate priority, in the hope of riding down before he can throw off the scent, and I will leave it to you, Mr. Arthur, to organize the posse and secure the whole country until he is located."

At first a first words two men had rushed to the road, and were already mounting horses. The first and fastest was placed at the command of the policeman, and in a minute he was away, riding breakneck into the hills, but the delay was enough to give Gardner about a mile's lead, and the Government house was a hawk for it on the ranch.

USEFUL FOR OVER 500 PURPOSES

Gillet's Lye can be used for so many purposes that their enumeration here would be impossible. For example, Gillet's Lye can be used for making soap, in washing dishes, also as a disinfectant. For softening hard water. As a means of removing grease and smoke stains. These are only a few of its many uses, but they serve to indicate what has made Gillet's Lye such a general household utility to-day.

Why Irish Are Fighters

A certain diet specialist tells us that the Irish are a bellicose people, largely because they eat little meat but take a good deal of buttermilk and vegetable food. The Irish nation also are great fighters and at the same time are said to consume great quantities of buttermilk. He thinks if the Irish were to change their diet they would become much more peaceable. It seems strange how good an argument can be formed out of a few non-essential facts and a vivid imagination.—Christian Guardian.

Regina Cattle Sale Very Successful

Prize Winning Shorthorn Bull Sells For $10,000

Considering financial conditions, the directors of the Saskatchewan Cattle Breeders' Association are very well pleased with the price obtained at the purebred cattle sale recently held in Regina. Purebred females did not sell as readily as purebred bulls. The demand for bulls, however, was steady, and the bidding brisk.

An average of $2000 each was secured for 35 Shorthorn bulls, and the top price for Shorthorns and for the sale was $10,000, which was paid for Mars Avon 2nd, sold by a Prince Albert man and purchased by a man from St. Walburg. This bull had been a prize winner at the International bull sale.

The average price for Hereford bulls was $182.90 on 20 head, with a top price for this breed of $375.90. Aberdeen Angus bulls sold at an average price of $1700 and the top price of $2500 was paid for Broodmare Blackburn 7th, sold by G. N. Hoffman of Redland, and purchased by Mr. Hume of Manitoba.

Over 200 head were sold through the ring, and the breeders who had well bred bulls and had them in good condition were well satisfied with the prices obtained. The better bull country is having its effect in increasing the demand for real good bulls.

An Amazing Watch

Has Four Dials and Runs for Thirty Years

One of the most remarkable watches in the world was recently constructed by a leading British firm. The front dial of the watch, upon which ordinary time is indicated, carries the four other dials. One of these shows the days of the week and the date of the month. The other forms a perpetual calendar, indicating the first, second, third and leap years. No. 3 dial indicates the phases of the moon and No. 4 acts as a recording chronograph showing hours and minutes, seconds and fifths of seconds. There is also an indicator and pointer which shows at any time to what extent the watch is wound up. The main dial also carries a further hand distinguished by a small sun near its outer end. This hand shows the position of the sun before or after clock time. The watch strikes the hours and the quarters and repeats the hours, quarters and minutes at any time desired. On the back of the watch there is a dial showing the sidereal day of 24 hours. It also carries a star chart or planisphere. This point on the chart corresponding to the North Pole is set at the centre of this dial and the exposed portion of the chart reveals the portion of the sky visible in the latitude in which the watch is used. The movements of the watch are arranged in three tiers and are fitted throughout with diamond and ruby jewels. The watch runs 24 hours with one winding. It was constructed to order and cost one thousand guineas.
